

OFFICER LINES UP FIVE AT THE POINT OF PISTOL

QUICK ARREST IN LOCAL ROBBERIES

Stores of Thomas Clothing Company and Teckemeyer's Grocery Entered by Thieves.

MEN TAKEN FROM A FREIGHT

Night Policeman Sensback Discovers Robbery at Clothing Store—B. & O. Dispatchers Co-operate.

The story of how an officer, single handed, lined up and arrested five men, believed to have been implicated in two bold robberies in this city about midnight Wednesday, together with the efficiency of the local police department and the co-operation of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern dispatchers would furnish a plot for a motion picture reel that would entirely eclipse the daring exploits of the brave and beautiful Helen. The robberies took place at the Thomas Clothing Company, North Chestnut street, and at Teckemeyer's grocery, East Second street.

Twelve raincoats, a number of suits, hats, four suit cases, a hand bag and other goods were stolen from the clothing store. Entrance was gained to the room through a rear window which opens out into a private alley way back of the store. With a heavy bar the steel shutters were pried open and the glass was smashed. Small pieces of the window pane were scattered over the rear of the store indicating that the glass must have been broken with a hard blow. At the grocery store twelve packages of chewing gum and twenty-five pennies were stolen.

The men returned here are: George Schill, Lexington, Ky. William Travis, Aurora, Ind. The trio charged with train riding and held in North Vernon pending a further investigation are: John Dolander, Louisville. George Simmons, —Virginia. John Hornback, Louisville.

The robbery at the Thomas Clothing Company was discovered by Night Officer Sensback soon after midnight when he walked into the dark alley way. He noticed that the shutters were open and immediately sent word to the police station. The officers were of the opinion that the thieves might have left the city on eastbound freight train No. 94 and the local dispatchers consented to send the word of the robbery to North Vernon. The officers there began an investigation and found a boy who said that he saw several men carrying suit cases and a bundle on the fast freight.

Word was then sent to Osgood and the officer there reached the station as the train was leaving. He saw the gang on the cars, however, and notified the Aurora and Cochran police. Officer Greene, of Cochran, met the train near the city limits and found the gang. He flashed his gun, gave warning that he would shoot if necessary, and was able to line up the bunch along the train. He saw the suit cases and ordered the men to carry them to the Cochran jail. The marshal brought up the rear of the procession and soon had the men safe in jail.

The local police were at once notified of the arrest and J. Buford Thomas and Hubert Bridges, of the Thomas Clothing Company, went to Cochran on an early morning train. Chief of Police McCord, Officer Wallace and Officer Russell also went to Cochran to bring back the men.

Schill and Travis were brought here and lodged in jail pending a preliminary hearing. Dolander, Simmons and Hornback were held in North Vernon charged with train riding. Simmons is not connected in any way with the robberies, the police say, as he was riding on the train before it reached Seymour and was warned by the train crew of the robbery and his possibility of arrest if he remained. However, he decided to take the risk and was locked up with the others, slated only with train riding.

The clothing carried in the new suit cases was also brought back here. Travis was wearing some of the clothing, it is said, and concealed a suit of blue serge under the mattress in the Cochran jail. The suit was not discovered until after the arrival of the couple here.

Until the men were questioned both steadfastly denied that they were guilty of the robberies. During the search here, however, Travis was confronted with so much positive evidence that he realized that it would be useless to maintain his innocence and told Chief of Police McCord that he was guilty. He denied that Schill was implicated with him in the robbery.

Schill is firm in his denial of any part in the burglaries. He says he had met Travis on a train at Mitchell several days ago and that he was with him in this city for several hours Wednesday afternoon. He said he boarded the fast eastbound freight and did not know that Travis was on the train until the time of the arrest. He paces back and forth in his cell and is apparently nervous. Travis was nervous when he first reached the jail but later lay down on the cot and began reading.

The police are investigating the robbery at the Teckemeyer grocery. Some of the officers are of the opinion that one of the men entered the store before closing time and concealed himself in the back room. A lower panel from the door leading into the main store was broken out with a brake shoe pin which was left on the floor. A package of chewing gum was also found on the floor when the store was opened this morning. Another theory is that entrance was gained through a rear window in the back room. The strange feature of the robbery there is that when the store was opened this morning all the windows were down and the doors were barred. This condition gives rise to the theory that the burglar was concealed in the room before it was closed for the night.

Travis and Schill were seen together here several times Wednesday. The former distributed chewing gum, the same brand stolen from Teckemeyer's among a number of children late Wednesday afternoon. He also carried with him a supply of new razors and knives which the police believe were stolen somewhere else. He sold four of the razors to a local man for fifteen cents a piece, explaining that he had purchased a job lot from a man in Indianapolis. He also had several new knives and razors with him at the time he was arrested.

Travis is an artist and recently painted the new scenery for the Aurora opera house. He was there several days and was identified by the Aurora police and others. He was here Wednesday and shouted to Hubert Bridges while the latter was painting a sign at the Thomas Clothing Company. As soon as Bridges saw him he recognized the man and Travis recalled the incident.

Schill and Travis were arraigned before Mayor Ross today on a charge of burglary and waived preliminary examination. They were bound over to circuit court. Unable to give bond they were held in the local jail and will be removed to the county jail later.

After the robbery was discovered a call was put in for Owen's bloodhounds at Bedford. The owner and the dogs reached here during the morning and went to Teckemeyer's grocery. The dogs took up a trail east on Second street to Broadway thence towards the Southeastern depot and lost the trail at a railroad switch in the B. & O. yards.

EXPRESS HITS MAN SITTING ON TRACK

W. C. Griffith, Aged Sixty-five Years, Fatally Injured—Body is Brought to This City.

HOME WAS IN INDIANAPOLIS

Deceased Was a Brother of the Rev. Howard Griffith, Methodist Minister at Hayden.

While sitting on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railroad tracks two miles west of North Vernon, asleep or in a stupor, W. C. Griffith, of Indianapolis, was hit and fatally injured by westbound express train No. 47 about 6:30 o'clock Wednesday night. Engineer George Bender, of this city, saw the man on the track and sounded the whistle but was unable to arouse him. The engineer expected the man to get off the track in response to the repeated danger signals and when he realized that the man made no attempt to remove the engine was too close upon him to avoid the accident. The train was stopped within eight car lengths after the man was hit.

Griffith, fatally wounded, was put on the train but he died before the express pulled into the waiting station. His skull was fractured in several places and his right leg was broken below the knee. His right shoulder was broken and both hands were badly bruised.

The body was removed immediately to Voss' undertaking establishment where the police searched the clothing for identification. In one pocket was found a Kingan Company time slip and a card bearing the address of Harvey street, Indianapolis. The police were successful in locating the man's son, Howard Griffith, of Irvington, who in company with Fred Otto, a son-in-law of the dead man, came here today and positively identified the body. The body will be shipped to Indianapolis for burial.

Howard Griffith said that his father had been employed in Kingan's plant in Indianapolis but quit working there a few weeks ago on account of ill health and secured employment as night watchman for the street car company. He said he had not seen his father since Saturday morning when he had a long talk with him. Griffith, however, visited his daughter in Indianapolis Wednesday morning and said that he was taking a two days' vacation. He did not say anything about leaving the city and when he left his daughter's home told her that he was going down town.

Howard Griffith is of the opinion that his father suddenly decided to visit his brother, the Rev. Howard Griffith, who is a Methodist minister at Hayden. He is of the opinion that he came to North Vernon and finding out that it would be some time before he could get a train for Hayden decided to walk there. The accident occurred two miles this side of North Vernon. The telephone message from the local police telling of the man's death was the first information the son had that his father had left the city.

Griffith was sixty-five years of age. He leaves his son and a daughter, both of whom live in Indianapolis. He was an unusually tall man being six feet and two inches tall.

Coroner Dickemeyer was notified of the accident and conducted the inquest this morning.

Wednesday afternoon Miss Peet gave away the tea roll and the cinnamon puffs which she presented to the woman in the audience who had been married the longest and to the woman who had been married the shortest time. Mrs. Margaret Matt, who has been married fifty-three years, received the tea rolls, and Mrs. Herman Bosse, who is a bride of three weeks, received the cinnamon puffs. Both ladies happened to be sitting on the same row of seats close to each other.

RIGHTS' SURVEY OF POST OFFICE SITE CONFIRMED

Indianapolis Engineers Verify Plat Recently Made by the Seymour City Engineer.

The survey of the postoffice site, corner Third and Chestnut streets, recently made by City Engineer W. H. Rights has been verified by that made by Jesup & More, of Indianapolis, who were engaged by the government to make the third survey. After the first survey was made the contractor found that an error had been made and asked the city engineer to make the second survey. Mr. Rights' bid was different from that of the first so the government decided to have the third made.

The survey made by the Indianapolis engineers is practically identical with that of Engineer Rights and the greatest difference does not exceed half an inch. The survey will go on permanent record and will be referred to in the future should any dispute concerning the boundaries of the lot arise.

WOMEN TRYING OUT MANY NEW RECIPES

School, in Society Hall is increasing with every session. So much enthusiasm is shown by the housewives of Seymour over this proposition that an effort will be made to have Miss Peet come to Seymour again next year if possible. Everybody in town is talking about her cooking. Miss Peet's doughnut recipe makes three dozen doughnuts and calls for an outlay of fifteen cents. She stirs up her doughnuts with an egg beater and advises that the dough be kept very soft.

Without any intention on her part, Miss Peet's school is helping business in Seymour. Women are eager to try all the recipes she uses and this creates a demand for materials she likes best. Her instruction in the use of the fireless cooker, has led to the determination on the part of many women to use one this summer.

Miss Peet disclaims anything sensational about her cookery methods. It is her sole aim to teach the women who attend her classes from day to day that it is possible, by the use of tested recipes, standard measurements, good materials and plenty of common-sense, for every woman to be a good cook. In her work she impresses housewives with the importance of being good cooks, of knowing which foods are most nutritious and most economical and how to best prepare these foods for the family. It is part of her course to teach women how to meet the digestive needs of each individual in the family, the children at school who need plenty of simple, wholesome, well prepared foods to help them along in their studies and the husband who, if he is an outdoor worker, needs the same kind of food and a little more of it, or if he is an indoor office man, needs food of a more delicate nature to tempt his less robust appetite.

As announced by Miss Peet, the recipes for Cecils and Tomato Sauce demonstrated by her today at the Republican Better Foods Better Homes School are given below together with some other interesting recipes submitted by her.

CLASS DAY EXERCISES.

The seniors of the high school proved themselves most capable hosts at the Class Day exercises Wednesday evening. They conducted their reception in the gymnasium of the high school building which was decorated with the colors of the school and the senior class. The program was well arranged to show the versatility of the graduating class. It consisted of musical selections, humorous readings, the will and prophecy of the class and the presentation of a prize to the student who has shown the greatest amount of literary ability while in school.

The presentation of the literary prize was made to Miss Jean Webber the editor in chief of "The Patriot." Miss Andrews made the presentation address. She said that it was hard to point out the one person who was far above the average in the literary work of the school as the class had an abundance of literary talent but in the instance of the class of 1916 some of the students had made the suggestion that the prize of this year be awarded to Miss Webber. Acting on that suggestion and with unanimous consent of the class she presented the Patriot editor with a set of Shakespeare plays. Following the presentation of the plays Lyman Blish, president of the class, took charge of the evening's entertainment and presented the following program: Solo.....Miss Rachel Barbour; Miss Hilda Howe accompaniment. Class Poem.....Miss Frieda Kasting. "At the Matinee".....Miss Rebecca Dixon.

ANNUAL ALUMNI MEETING TO BE HELD FRIDAY NIGHT

Reception for Class of 1916, and Many Other Matters to Come Before Membership.

The Alumni reception to the class of 1916 of Seymour high school will be held tomorrow evening at the high school building. An interesting program has been arranged, and a very enjoyable evening is being anticipated both by members of the class and by the former graduates.

This year's Alumni meeting will be in one respect, the most important that has even been held. It will be the first meeting of the association as an incorporated body, empowered by the State of Indiana to receive funds and act as trustee for them, and to perform other functions which are permissible only in incorporated bodies do. The certificate of incorporation was received from the secretary of state only yesterday. The chief reason for incorporating was to permit the association to act as trustee for the loan fund for girl graduates of the high school which the Friday Magazine Club has decided to start.

It is the purpose of the officers to effect a more permanent and more effective working organization, and to put the Alumni Association where it rightfully belongs, in the very forefront of the organizations which have for their purpose the betterment of the city, and, in particular, the schools of the city.

It is the desire of the Alumni committee in charge of the meeting tomorrow night that every member show his interest in the movement for a stronger and more active organization by attending. Several out of town members have expressed their intention of being present.

OWENS DISSATISFIED WITH PAY OF $15 FOR DAY'S WORK

Bedford Detective Says He Positively Will Not Come to Seymour Again.

"I'm off of Seymour for life," emphatically declared Bob Owens, the Bedford detective and blood hound owner, just before he left for home this afternoon. He was called here following the robberies last night. The robbers were arrested in Cochran before he arrived.

FUNSTON ALTERS MILITIA
DISTRIBUTION PROGRAM

Fourth Texas Infantry will be Sent Into the Big Bend Country to Protect Railroads.

By United Press.
San Antonio, Tex., May 25.—General Funston today changed his plans for militia distribution to meet the Carranzista movement into the section opposite the Big Bend of Texas. The Fourth Texas infantry will be sent into the Big Bend, he announced, to guard railroad bridges and tracks and small settlements instead of going to Eagle Pass.

Funston contradicted advices from Washington, stating that he had not asked for the Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma militia at the time he asked for the state troops already placed at his demand. He still hopes to obtain those troops.

SOUND ADVICE FROM FARMER

He Had Rescued Motorist and Balloonist Same Day—Would Find Life Easier at Home.

Mr. Jephtha Wade, a well-known Cleveland man, has a winter home at Thomasville, Ga. One of his sons is an amateur balloonist and occasionally makes an ascent from Thomasville. If the family fail to hear promptly from him they set forth in a motor car and search until they find him, the Youth's Companion states.

One day, when the roads were slippery with mud, the automobile skidded and slid part way down a bank. It brought up without damage against a large tree. Mr. Wade could not get it back on the road and appealed for help to a farmer plowing in the field below. The farmer hitched his team to the front axle and soon pulled the car out of trouble.

Mr. Wade looked back and said: "That tree saved us from a bad accident; if it had not been there we should have turned over and been badly hurt."

"Yes, sub," drawled the farmer, "that certainly is a useful tree! This mornin' a young feller in a balloon got stuck in it and I had to h'ist him out." "Why, that was our son!" exclaimed both Mr. and Mrs. Wade, excitedly. The farmer looked at them for a moment with a puzzled expression; then his face lighted up with a smile, and he said:

"I reckon you folks would find life easier if you was to stay home more."

CLEVER TRICK WITH FIGURES

Method of Telling Which Hand Apple or Other Object Is Held in Behind One's Back.

"Which hand?" is a common way of allotting apples or tasks, when the hands are held behind, and the choice is made by calling either the right or left. By an arithmetical trick you can do away with chance and secure the object you desire.

Tell your friend to call the desired object three and the other one four. Then tell him to multiply the number of the object held concealed in the right hand by three and the one in the left hand by two. When he has secured this result, ask him to add the two results together and tell you whether the sum is an odd or an even number. If it be an odd one, the desired object will be in the right hand, if an even number, in the left hand.—The American Boy.

BOY CLUB MEMBERS CONTEST

Fruit Trees in State of Washington Practically Freed From Injurious Insect Pests.

A contest among boy club members which resulted in direct and material benefit to the community is reported by the state agent at Washington. Last spring and early summer the fruit trees in a certain locality were heavily infested with tent caterpillars. The local leader offered prizes to the boys bringing to her the greatest number of big tents full of caterpillars. As a result the trees were practically freed from the pests, 2,731 tents having been brought in and destroyed.

Economic Conditions Will Compel Household Efficiency

With food prices steadily soaring and little prospect for relief, especially during the next five years, greater household efficiency must be the solution to the high cost of living problem. Every family with a limited income is facing the same problems and the responsibility of meeting them is left largely to the housewife. In almost every instance when a family decides upon a "retrenchment policy" the expenses of the household are the first to be reduced. This adds difficulties to the already perplexing problem of household management.

As the housewife is almost solely in control of the affairs of her domicile, she is expected to meet the needs of the family with the smaller allowance. When the plans are being discussed this appears to be easy enough; but when the plans are put into practice many small accounts which were not anticipated are made and as a usual thing the "retrenchment" must come in the kitchen. At the same time a sufficient amount of wholesome food must be provided for the growing children, for after all, their health is the most important consideration.

Students of economic conditions do not give much encouragement for a relief from the rising prices of all foodstuffs. Following the outbreak of the conflict abroad staples such as sugar and flour made an unprecedented advance. "Oh, well, the price is bound to come down after the war is over and we can get along for awhile," was the optimistic view of the somewhat serious situation. But it seems that with the declaration of peace—whenever it shall come—the situation will be even more serious.

The war torn countries which have engaged in the war have their best men at the front. Thousands upon thousands of these men will never return and even a larger number will return maimed so badly that it will be impossible for them to resume their former occupations. Thousands of these men were farmers and upon them depended the food supply of the country. And, even if each one would return ready to resume work immediately it would be several years before the normal conditions are restored as a great readjustment must take place.

This condition, unparalleled in modern history, means that the greatest country that has been able to preserve peace must assist. It means that the United States will be expected to contribute liberally to the unfortunate countries abroad. The answer to this can only be—"higher prices." With the domestic demand ever increasing, together with the additional demand from abroad, the resources of this country will be taxed. The prices of foodstuffs are regulated very largely by the old principle of supply and demand.

Housewives in this country are already giving more attention to efficiency than ever before. They are watching closely the buying for the table. They are interested in the preparation of foods which are wholesome and which are within the allowance granted them. They have found that material saving can be effected by the elimination of certain articles of food which contain the minimum of nutritive elements and which appear at the top of the list of high prices. Experience is teaching them that appetizing, wholesome foods can be prepared without the expenditure of large sums.

Household efficiency is by no means fully developed, nor will it be in the next decade. New discoveries are being revealed each day by the students of the question. There are women in this country who have made this work their life study and they are doing inestimable good for the housewives of the United States. They are working out and solving the problems with which every family is face to face. Household efficiency is not a fad. It is a necessity. It is not a theoretical experiment. It is a practical solution to one of the most important problems of the home.

$100,000 Endowment Fund Has Been Contributed

(By Mrs. W. K. Jones, Field Chairman of Endowment, General Federation of Women's Clubs.)

New York, May 25.—We are ready to announce that the $100,000 endowment fund of the Federated Clubs has been fully contributed by the clubwomen of the of the United States. The announcement will be formally made at the National Convention now going on here.

When the growing need of a larger income for the General Federation became too great to be ignored it was proposed either to increase the dues or raise an endowment.

Larger dues might shut out some clubs from membership and the women gathered at Cincinnati for the

Practical Paths to Happiness

(By Barbara Boyd.)

A noted teacher of domestic economy said recently:

"When you are tired out after getting dinner don't wish you had married the other man. See if you can't rearrange your kitchen or your work to make things better."

That's good sense, isn't it? But how many of us, I wonder, would take such a sane course? Do not many of us, when worn out with our round of household cares, occasionally sit down and, if we do not exactly wish we had married the other man, we do wonder why we married at all, or we wish John would get a raise in his salary, or somebody die and leave us a legacy. We do not often look to ourselves or our work to see where we might better things. We gaze longingly or enviously or bitterly at some other state of existence where conditions we think would be as we desire.

But the facts of the case are what probably nine times out of ten, yes, ten times out of ten, we cannot enter that imagined blissful state toward which our gaze is turned. We have got to stay right where we are and we know it. And with a sigh we go back to our work, no better contented, probably less content, because of our little excursions into the realms of fancy.

Yet if we would do as this practical woman suggests, perhaps there would be no need for John's salary to be raised for our burdens to be lightened. We might lift the load ourselves by a little common sense planning or a method of living.

We may be living more pretentiously than there is any need to for true enjoyment. If we are living more elaborately than our means warrant, if there is a sense of strain in the household finances, it is not necessarily John's salary that needs to be raised. A change in our ideas as to what constitutes true living may bring relief.

If we are dressing the children more elaborately than is necessary, we can perhaps save ourselves sewing and mending and laundering, by revising our ideas on the subject of dress; and in doing so, not lose anything that is real either, but get saner ideas on the subject of dress.

And the suggestion of this domestic economist need not apply only to household matters. We can carry it into other conditions of life.

If we are casting our eyes on some other business position and wishing we had it because ours is so taxing, perhaps here we need to turn our eyes inside our office instead of outside and see whatever the burdens that seemingly are weighing us down are in the work itself, or in the way we do, or in mismanagement of our time, or in something for which we are responsible.

It is a lot more satisfying to our vanity to look for the source of our troubles outside of ourselves. But it is not always the true way to find it. If we will look at our work, or our method of doing it, or our plan of living, we may find that here is where a remedy can be applied that will accomplish as much as help from the outside.

And when the help from the outside cannot or will not come, then if we do not wish to remain in a state of discontent or dissatisfaction, we had better turn our gaze about to see if we ourselves cannot find a cure.

For Her Daily Wear

The little girl of five, or six, or seven or so, looks well in almost any style of coat, and needs at least one that is livable for her daily wear. Here is one made of plain serge, piped with a striped fabric that will serve for her journeyings to and from the kindergarten or school and for her playtime and any other time during the cool days of spring.

The model shown in the picture is about as simply put together as it is possible for a coat to be. It is cut on familiar lines and presents no difficulties to the home dressmaker, because she may secure a pattern very like it from any standard pattern company. It hangs almost straight from the shoulders, and therefore there is little in the way of fitting to do. It is to be lined with mesaline or other thin silk, and may be interlined with a light muslin.

In making coats at home it is a good plan to cut the interlining first and, if alterations are found necessary, make them when the interlining has been basted up and tried on the figure. When the interlining has been made to set as it should, the material for the coat and the lining is to be cut according to the interlining, which will serve as a pattern. Sometimes the collar is a little difficult to adjust, and sometimes setting the sleeves in properly gives the home dressmaker some uneasiness.

The coat pictured has a wide belt of serge terminating at each side, where it joins a plaited girde of silk that extends across the front. This is fastened to the belt with a button at both sides and may be left off entirely. The belt is stitched to the coat along its upper side. The silk girde is merely an item of decoration and, if it is omitted, a fourth button is to be added to the three large, flat bone buttons at the front.

The Open Meeting of the Tuesday Club

Mrs. Ida Sandau, secretary of the Tuesday Club, prepared an account of the recent Open Meeting in verse. At the request of the members the verses are published as follows:

The fifteenth "Open Meeting"
Of The Tuesday Club has passed,
But its many pleasing memories
With us will always last.

The home of Mrs. Marie Smith
Was the scene of the event.
And 'twas there we all together
In our very best clothes went.

The house was filled with spring blossoms
Shedding their sweet perfume,
Filling the air with fragrance,
Like a garden in full bloom.

The hostess and Mrs. Williams
Welcomed each arriving guest,
With a cheerful smile of welcome,
And a pleasant word of jest.

And when we were all seated
On many rows of chairs,
We heard a soft quick footstep,
Coming down the long front stairs.

When through the open doorway
The little lady came,
And our President introduced her,
Mrs. Strauss of "Country Contributor" fame.

Our woman hearts were anxious
The distinguished one to see,
And hear her pleasing address
Given so gracefully.

"How Mother got her Halo"
Was the subject of her theme,
And she told us her life's story,
Showing it not all a dream.

The rag carpet and sizzling stove wood,
Which was way too long and green.
The chicken grease and ironing
Were some of the troubles she had seen.

But after many attempts
To soar up in the sky
And write newspaper stories
Of the Court House steeple high.

She "found herself" a failure
And came down with a jar.
And thereafter wrote the simple things,
Which were published near and far.

She showed how Mother's Halo
Is won through self sacrifice,
Living for and helping others,
Brings us blessings above price.

The social time which followed
Made us all with pleasure beam,
While the refreshment committee
Served us coffee, cake and ice cream.

But now 'twas time to go,
The hours had flown so fast.
The clock upon the mantle
Told us six o'clock had passed.

So we thanked our gracious hostess
For the lovely time we'd had,
And bent our footsteps homeward,
Feeling well repaid and glad.

Now it's up to the committee
For nineteen seventeen
To make next year's Open Meeting
As pleasing as the one we've just seen.

MRS. SANDAU, Secretary.

CHAPTER X.

Changes.

The faculty of Minot house recognized the value of publicity. Theirs was a message vital to the community. It seemed, too, as if the people of Sheffield could never have too much news of Minot house. When the editor of a Sheffield paper put on a new reporter, he would usually say: "Go up to Minot house and get a story. There's always something good there. Let's see what you can make of it."

Rodney Jones got this assignment his first day on the Evening View. Jones went to Minot house, watched the crowds of students ebbing and flowing, tried to catch something of the atmosphere of the place, and waited for an inspiration. It came, in the shape of a blond boy with a slight oddity of gait. Curiosity, which is at the bottom of what is called news instinct, impelled him to follow Charlie Thomas.

The boy took the elevator and so did Jones. At the top the elevator door slid back and disclosed a vast room, with half a hundred students in smock-like aprons working at easels or adjustable tables. The room was quite still; everybody except the instructors seemed too busy to talk. Those who did so conversed in whispers.

"Is this—is this the art department?" asked Jones.

"U-huh," said Charlie Thomas, generally. "Want to see somebody?"

"I'm a reporter from the View. Who's the boss here, the professor, or whatever you call him?"

"Mr. McGregor? That's Mr. McGregor over there."

Charlie indicated a serious young man who was explaining something to one of the students by the use of his thumb. Charlie put on his own smock and fell to work on a smutty-looking Apollo Belvedere which he had outlined on his board.

Mr. McGregor led the newspaper man about the big room, giving him an animated account of the work of the classes and explaining everything with great politeness. When they reached Charlie, the reporter stopped.

Mr. McGregor was an artist, but he had had some canny Scotch ancestors. There was a "story" in Charlie, and McGregor knew that it was a good one; but it would depend upon Charlie whether or not it could be had.

"Thomas," said McGregor, "just a minute, please."

Charlie deserted Apollo with alacrity.

"Yes, Mr. McGregor."

"I wish you'd show Mr. Jones some of your little portrait sketches."

"They're not art," said Charlie. "They're no good. I've torn up most of 'em, honestly I have, Mr. McGregor."

"What are you, a budding C. D. Gibson?" asked the reporter. He didn't mean to be fresh, but he sounded so complacent, so cocksure. Way down inside Charlie Thomas the little mischief imp tickled him.

"Wait a minute," he said, and picked up a scrap of paper, which he laid on a magazine. Then, with a pencil, he made some rapid strokes, glancing momentarily at the interested and grinning Jones.

"Here you are," he said, and went back to his work.

Jones took the sketch, gave it one look, and burst into a roar of laughter. He eyed the caricature again, and the smile faded from his face.

"Say, professor," he said, "what's that boy trying to do, make fun of me? It's clever, but—"

He paused and stared stupidly at the sketch. It was like looking into a glass which reflected not alone his lineaments but his very soul. Every meanness, every little narrow, petty prejudice, every smug conceit, stood there as legibly as if printed in Gothic type.

"This young man," said McGregor,

"may or may not be an artist some day. I often wonder if he will. But he has this astonishing gift of caricature and hardly ever uses it. He says he doesn't dare to; he hates to hurt people's feelings. He is singularly tender-hearted, and I wonder that he should have allowed himself this indulgence."

"I guess my face was too much of a temptation to him," said Jones. He slipped the sketch into his pocket. "Goodby, young fellow; much obliged. Goodby, Professor McGregor. Thanks for your time and trouble."

"I'm awfully sorry, Mr. McGregor," said Charlie in distress when the elevator door had slammed. "I wish I hadn't done that."

"I shouldn't worry, Thomas. Come and sit down here. I want to talk to you."

Charlie sat down quite humbly. Maybe he was in for a lecture.

"Thomas," said Mr. McGregor, "did you ever hear the parable of the talents?"

"Sure I have," said Charlie; "everybody has."

"I think you have a very remarkable gift, my boy. Your pencil often discovers the splendid traits of some subjects as well as the meanness of others. The day may come when you will be an instrument for good, because you have this wonderful gift of telling the truth with a pencil or a bit of charcoal."

"Maybe it will help me find the Grail," said Charlie gravely.

"The Grail?"

"It's boys had a society called the Galahad Knights. Francis Willett was the founder of it. Most of them went off to school or college. But I've stuck to it ever since."

"You haven't given up the Quest, then?"

"No; I'm going to follow it as long as I live."

"Well, then Thomas, let me tell you that your talent will help you find the Grail, as you have suggested. That is all for his morning."

Jones went back to the View office and wrote his story, which in due time appeared in the Sunday issue. But it said nothing about Charlie Thomas. Jones took home the sketch and hung it with a pin on the wall near his bed. Every night before he turned in, and every morning when he arose, he studied it.

"If that's the kind of a chap I am," he would repeat, "I'm going to change or bust."

Mary Alice Brown looked up, one morning in the "gloves," and caught the eye of a young man standing in the aisle before her counter.

"Hello, Mary Alice," said the young man. He had a good-humored face, a complacent manner, and very red hair.

"Francis Willett," cried Mary Alice. "Where did you come from?"

The young man's red hair was particularly noticeable, because he wore no hat, a circumstance which struck Mary Alice as odd.

"I came down from the general offices of this establishment to see you, Mary Alice," said Francis. "I'm working here. Do you remember, we both said we wished we didn't have to be educated, so we could work in a store? Well, we're both here."

"But how about your education, Francis?"

"I've just begun. I was expelled from college last week."

"Likely. Why don't you tell the truth? Are you sick or—"

"Crazy? Yes, I'm crazy, I guess; or I was. If I hadn't been crazy, I'd still be in college."

Mary Alice studied Francis Willett thoughtfully. She wished she had Charlie Thomas' talent. She guessed, shrewdly, that his father had given him too much money to spend and it had partly spoiled him. This grieved Mary Alice, for at heart she was very fond of Francis.

"What are you doing in the store?" she asked.

"I'm learning the business; began this morning. I'm a sort of cub assistant to Mr. Stacey, a general handy little man in his office, not quite so humble as an office boy or nearly so exalted as a saleslady. I'm neither hay nor grass, but I need cutting; and they've started in with my allowance. I must live, move and have my being on ten dollars a week, pay my board at home, buy my clothes and lunches, and take you to see the films once a week."

"Mercy!" said Mary Alice. "Here comes the floorwalker. Do you want him to see you loitering here? I don't."

If Francis had been a dilatory cash boy, he couldn't have scuttled off more guiltily.

Lucy, innocently busy with boxes of gloves that in no way interested her except that they were near Mary Alice, asked: "Who was that nice-lookin' fellow, Mary Alice? The one with the pink hair?"

"That's Mr. Willett, Mr. Stacey's new assistant."

"Mary Alice Brown, is that the Francis Willett, John Willett's son, the one that's so awful rich? I bet it is; I've heard he was a carrot-top. Oh, don't be so hateful! I'm simply crazy to know."

Mary Alice grinned at Lucy, but said nothing, and the other girl went poutingly about her business. She sputtered her grievance to Hilda and Jenny.

"I don't see what he could have wanted," she said. "Maybe he'll come again. He's awful nice looking."

"Sure," said Hilda. "I've seen him lots of times; his folks have got heaps of money. I don't see what he wants to work here for."

"You mustn't come down here very often, Francis," warned Mary Alice one day. The girls talk. Besides, I don't believe Mr. Stacey would like you to be spending your time visiting a—shopgirl."

"Nonsense, Mary Alice. It's the only pleasure I have. He wouldn't mind."

"Somebody ought to tell him," asserted Mary Alice.

"Somebody's going to tell you how pretty you are."

"Hush, you big silly. I thought you said I was skinny."

"Good heavens, Mary Alice, you've a long memory. Do you still think I run to elbows, like Sam's pup?"

"You run mostly to loud neckties and foolish talk. For the love of goodness, go back to your own work and let me do mine. No'm, the men's hosiery's on the Essex street side. Mr. Willett, will you please show this lady to the men's furnishings? Thank you; goodby."

Mary Alice decided that adversity had done Francis Willett a world of good. He began to lose his complacency. Stacey was pretty frank in the matter of criticism, and Mary Alice guessed that all was not rosy in the upstairs office. She wondered how long Francis would hold his job if Stacey were not an old friend of John Willett.

DELEGATES TALK PERMANENT PEACE

National League to Enforce Peace in First Annual Convention in New York City.

TAFT HEADS ORGANIZATION

Herbert S. Houston Declares That Business of the Country is Back of Movement.

Washington, May 25—"We are not really oddities!"

Delegates to the first annual convention of the National League to Enforce Peace didn't say that in so many words when they gathered here today for the opening session under former President William Howard Taft, but that was the idea they wanted to convey.

"We believe," said Herbert S. Houston, President of The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and a prominent member of the League, "that permanent international peace is a business proposition that has to be organized and pushed through by men with red blood in their veins just as anything else that is worth while has to be handled.

"Permanent peace means a great deal to the business interest of the world and they are behind this organization heart, soul and body.

"There is nothing visionary about the plans of this League. There are no dreamers in it. Look at the lists and I think you will agree that they contain the names of big men who do big things in a big way."

Two of the principal speakers at the convention will be Secretary of War Newton D. Baker and Major General Leonard Wood.

The arrival during the last few days of more than two thousand delegates from every section of the country is regarded as significant of the attitude toward peace among political, commercial, social, religious, and educational interests in the United States.

States and cities have sent representatives, as have chambers of commerce, boards of trade, universities and colleges, labor organizations, granges and churches.

The committee pointed out that the convention is not a mere pacifist gathering. The convention was called at this time, it was said, as a definite move to obtain political action on the part of the United States, in favor of the idea of a league of nations to be formed at the close of the present war in Europe. According to the League's program of proposals adopted when it was organized in Independence Hall last June, the powers to be invited to join a league of nations, are expected to pledge the use of their joint armed and economic forces against any signatory power which shall refuse to submit a dispute to a court of arbitration or council of conciliation, before beginning hostilities or declaring war.

Other speakers beside Ex-President Taft, Secretary of War Baker and Maj. Gen. Wood, are: President A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University; James Cardinal Gibbon, of Baltimore; Shailer Mathews, Dean of the Divinity School of Chicago University; Harry A. Wheeler, banker, of Chicago; Edward A. Filene, head of the Filene stores in Boston; President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, of the University of California; Hamilton Holt, George Grafton Wilson, Professor of International Law at Harvard University; Talcott William, John Bates Clark, Director of the Department of Economics of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace; R. G. Rhet, of Charlestown, S. C.; President of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Samuel Gompers, Oliver Wilson, of Peoria, President of the National Grange; Theodore Marburg, ex-Ambassador to Belgium, and Herbert S. Houston, President of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

CENTENNIAL COMMITTEE HAS ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

Encouraging Reports Heard From
All Sub-Committees—Big Pageant to be Staged at Park.

One of the most enthusiastic meetings which the Centennial Festival committee has yet held was the one of last evening. Encouraging reports were heard from all of the sub-committees, reports which show that the preliminary work is well under way.

The finance committee reported excellent progress in its campaign for funds, and indicated that the work of financing the celebration would soon be completed. The advertising committee has already begun on the preliminary advertising, and will have advertising matter at all of the near-by celebrations, chautauquas, etc. Other early advertising will include large signs near the interurban and railway passenger stations at all near-by towns, the Centennial buttons, Centennial stickers, etc. These will be ready for distribution within a few weeks.

Claud Carter, of the program committee, told of his impressions of the Bloomington pageant, and outlined in brief what his committee expects to do along the same line. While no definite plans have been decided upon for the local pageant, Mr. Carter promises to produce one that will out-distance any similar undertaking in this part of the state. From 800 to 1,000 people will be required for the pageant, it is believed. The spectacle will be staged in the city park, which will afford a natural stage setting of rare beauty, and will also provide room for a monster audience. This feature of the local celebration, as all the other special features, is to be free. At most all of the other centennial celebrations admission has been charged for the pageant, but the local committee intends that all who desire may see this portrayal of one hundred years of Jackson county history.

PICTURE BY EARL M. COX IS GIVEN FIRST AWARD

Undine is the Title of a Beautiful
Water Color Seen at the Local Art Exhibit.

A picture, known as "Undine," painted by Earl M. Cox, of this city, has been awarded first prize in the local department of the art exhibit at the high school building. Undine is a water spirit of the female sex, resembling in character the sylphs or spirits of the air. The name frequently appears in classical mythology. This picture was given the first award over a number of excellent paintings, water colors and crayon work entered by other local artists. The exhibit is one of the best ever held in connection with the art league exhibit.

The pupils of the Laurel street school attended the exhibit this afternoon in a body. The attendance at the exhibit this week has been very gratifying to the members of the league and the officers who have worked hard for its success. There is no admission, all expenses of getting the collection here having been defrayed by the league.

Successful Supper.

The supper given by the ladies of the Central Christian church in the Giger building last evening was well attended. About three hundred persons were served. The ladies netted about $135 but a few expenses are to be paid. The proceeds will go into the new church building fund.

—by keeping your teeth REALLY CLEAN.

"But," you say, "I brush my teeth regularly, yet they decay." Yes, you brush them, but do you REALLY CLEAN them? Tonight, after brushing your teeth, examine them closely. You will likely find an accumulation of tartar on the enamel and bits of food deposit hiding in the crevices.

Decay, as well as the dangerous gum disease called Pyorrhea, usually develops only in the mouth where germ-laden tartar is present. SENRECO, the formula of a dental specialist, keeps the teeth REALLY CLEAN. It embodies specially prepared soluble granules unusually effective in cleaning away food deposits. Moreover, it is particularly destructive to the germ of Pyorrhea.

Go to your dealer today and get a tube of Senreco—keep your teeth REALLY CLEAN and protect yourself against Pyorrhea and decay. Send 4c to Senreco, 304 Walnut St., Cincinnati, Ohio, for liberal-sized trial package.
